Find the right flooring for you

Use this handy tool to help select the best flooring options for your home.

HELPFUL DEFINITIONS

What is high sunlight exposure

Sunlight exposure is considered 'high' if it gets 6 or more hours of direct exposure throughout the day i.e. a living space with north facing windows. This is an important consideration, as some products are more resistant than others to harsh New Zealand sunlight.

What is prolonged water exposure

Prolonged water exposure is considered to be puddles of water sitting on the surface of the flooring for 24+ hours. Areas such as bathrooms or laundries have a higher risk of prolonged water exposure. Some flooring products are slightly less resistant to water damage.

Durability vs. comfort

While all our products are durable and come with lengthy warranties, some flooring types have a slight edge when it comes to durability. Likewise, some are quieter, warmer and softer due to their material composition.

OPEN HERE

Why it's right for you

Laminate

Laminate is resistant to fading and warping, even in New Zealand's harsh sunlight. This will preserve the appearance of your flooring for years to come.

Laminate is also more durable due to the use of hardened resin and aluminium oxide.

Please note: Take care to clean any spills or water quickly from the surface of the floor as prolonged exposure to water can reduce the lifespan of your flooring. Water must not sit on the surface of laminate flooring for more than 48 hours.

Bamboo

Bamboo is the most durable natural flooring available. Although it sits at a higher price point than laminate, it is also a more sustainable option.

As a natural fibre, bamboo is susceptible to moisture damage. This makes it unsuitable for bathrooms and laundries.

Hybrid

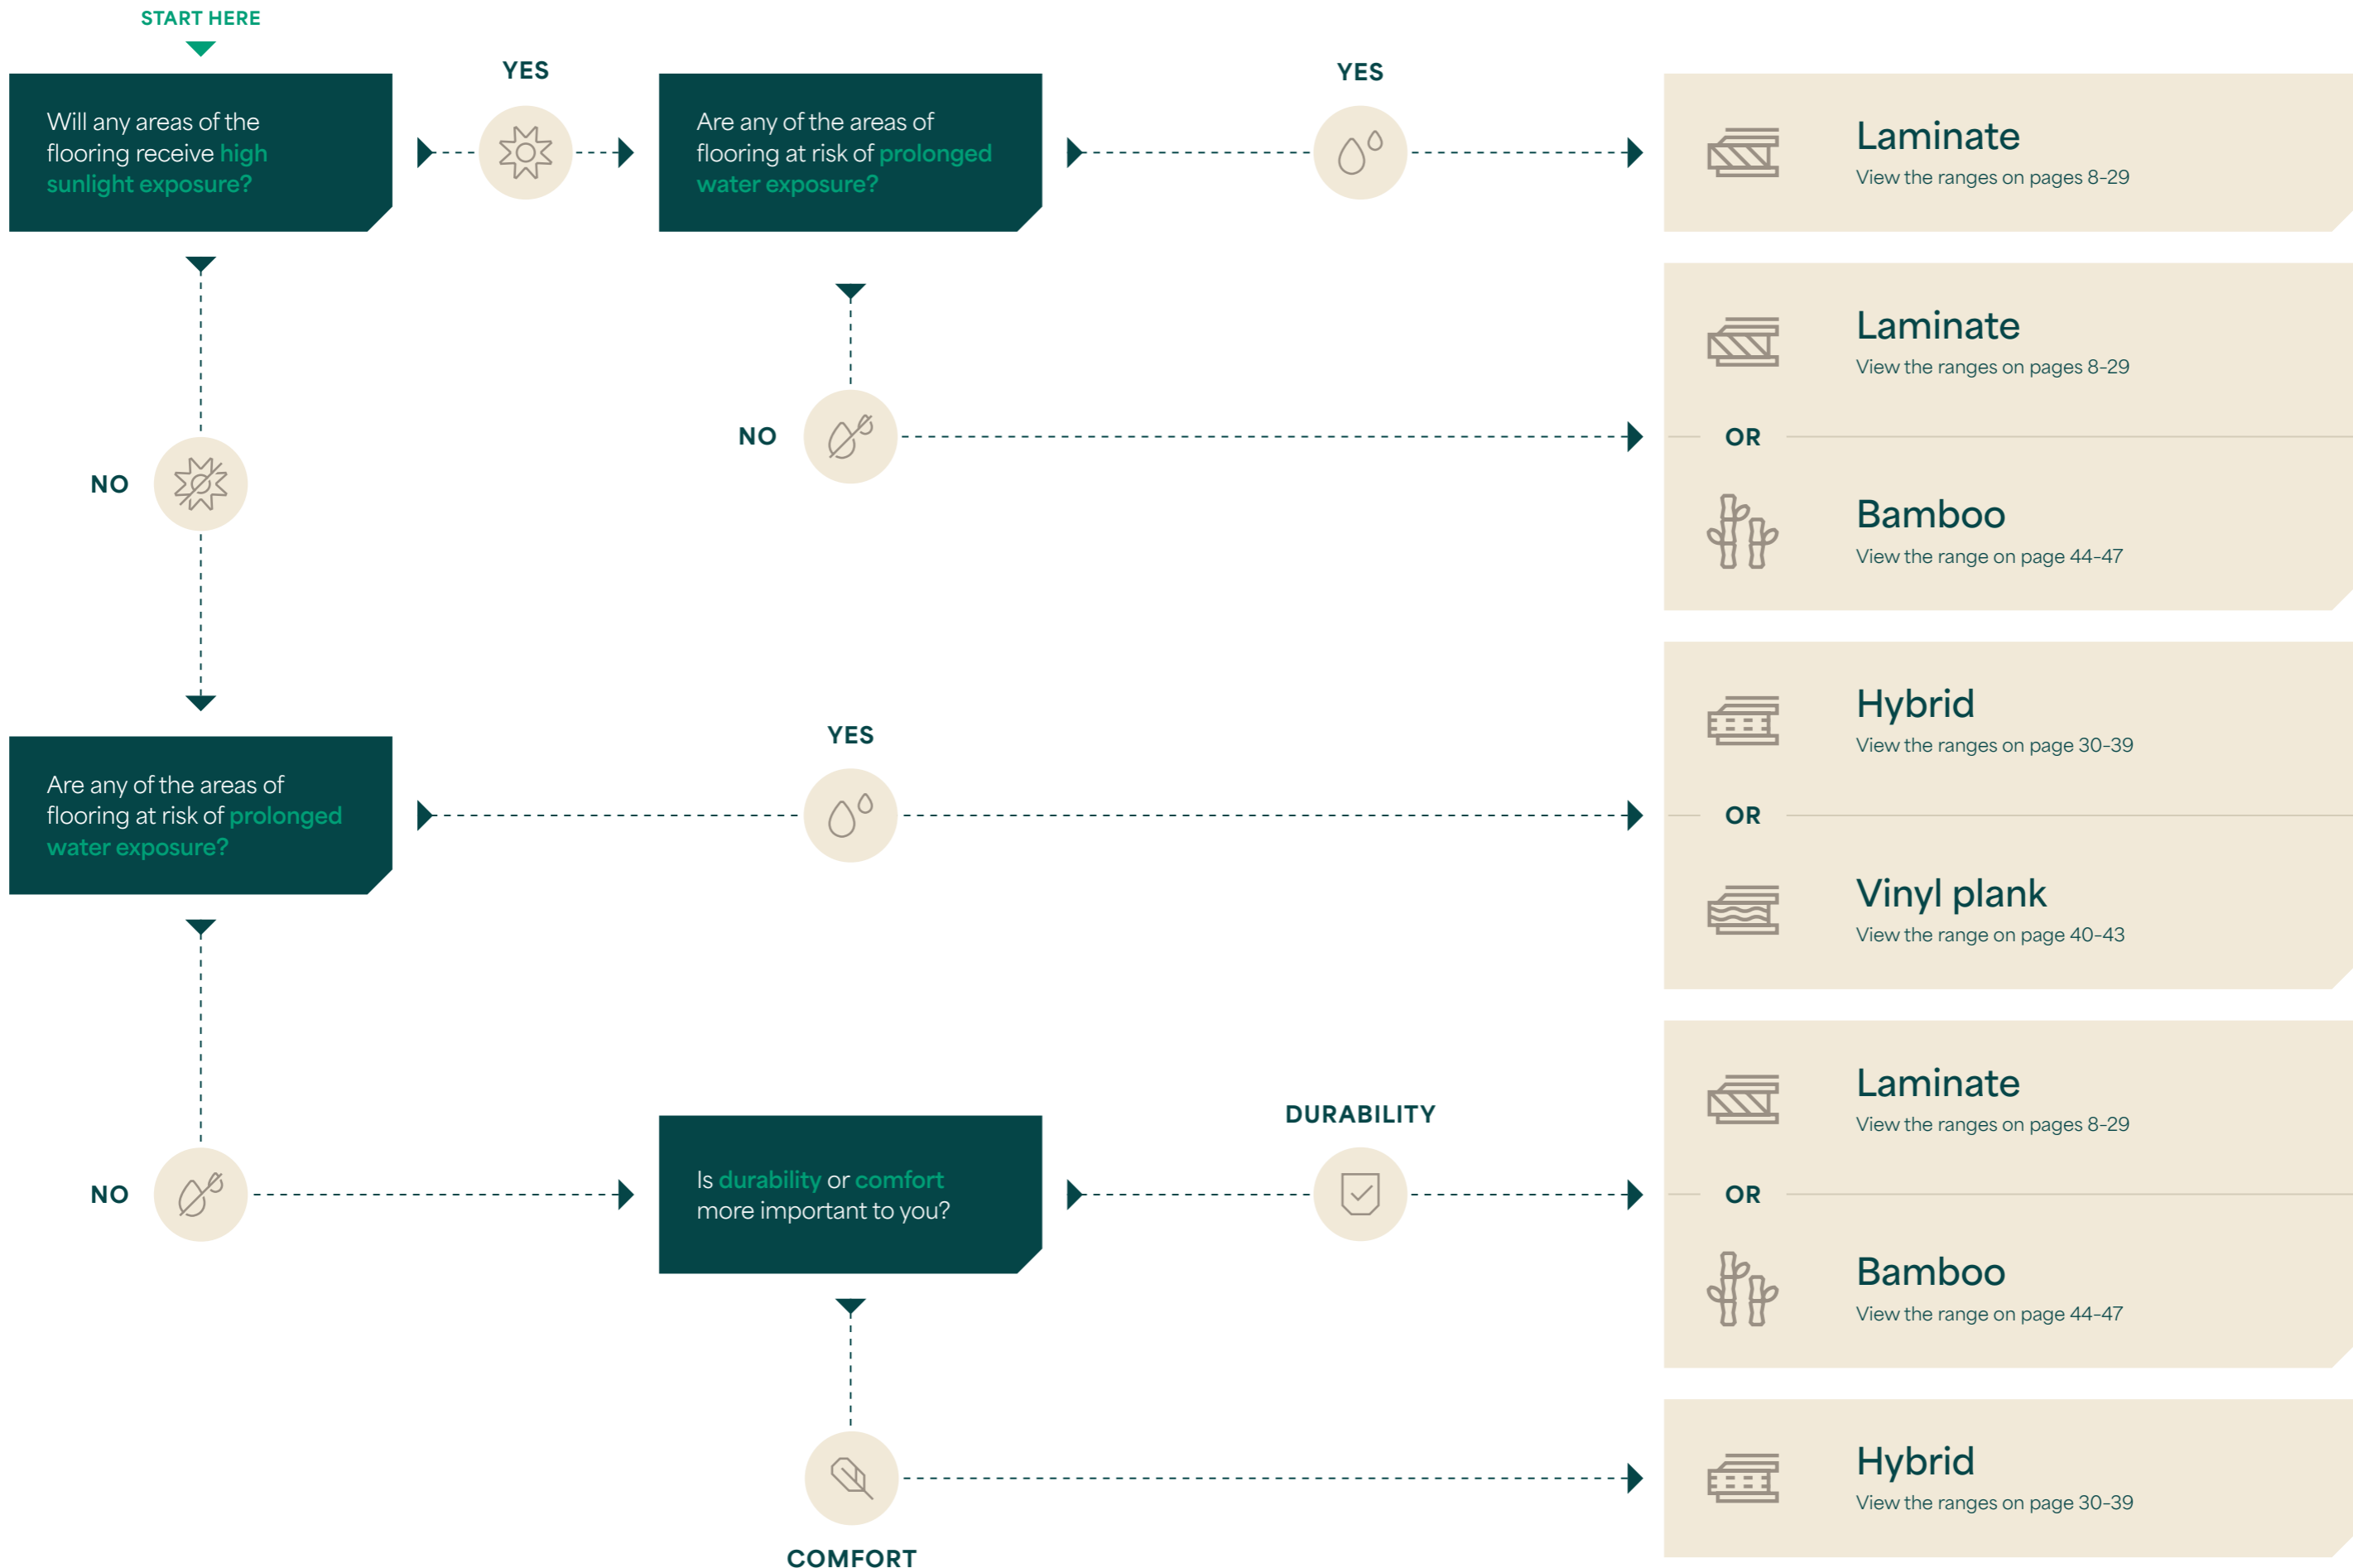

Hybrid flooring is 100% waterproof, even if water remains on the surface for extended periods of time and offers better slip resistance than other flooring options.

However, in areas of direct sunlight, hybrid flooring is susceptible to fading and warping due to the heat.

Because of its thick composite core and attached underlay, hybrid flooring offers a softer feel underfoot than traditional hard surfaces like stone or tile. It's also more thermally stable, meaning it doesn't get too cold in the winter or hot in the summer, contributing to the overall comfort of your home.

Vinyl plank

Vinyl plank is similar to hybrid flooring with the same high level of waterproofing. It can also be susceptible to fading when exposed to direct sunlight long-term. However, it is more forgiving of subfloor variations and its ability to be installed without removing or undercutting skirting makes it an ideal choice for renovations. And its ability to cover large areas without transitions makes it great for commercial applications, too.

E3 compliance

All our flooring is E3 compliant

The New Zealand building code clause E3/AS1 states that an impervious and easily cleaned surface must extend at least 1.5 m from any sanitary appliance within kitchens, toilets, laundries and bathrooms. This must also include perimeter protection from water ingress.

Our products have been independently tested under the international standard ISO 4760 by NZWTA, and test data is available on request.

When installed and maintained as per our installation and maintenance instructions, our products are suitable to be used as an 'alternative solution' and meet E3/AS1 requirements.

For more information on installation and maintenance in regards to E3 compliance, visit woodlandlifestyle.co.nz or contact us directly.
